NEW ETHICS COURSE AVAILABLE ONLINE

Beginning this year, one of the four ethics hours that is required to be taken every three years must be from a course about Board statutes and rules. Everyone renewing their license for 2016 will need to take such a course approved by the Board during 2015. One option is to take a self-study course via the Board's website (<http://www.arkansas.gov/asbpa/ASBPAEthicsClass.html>). This course is free for all Arkansas active license holders. To take the course you will need to register by entering your License #, first and last name, and date of birth. Anyone who has problems registering for the course should contact the Board to make sure the information you are entering matches what we have on file.

Before taking this course, please review the following instructions:

- Each module must be completed before the quiz can be completed. Click on the module and then click the "play" button in the bottom left hand corner. Read the slides and allow the slide deck to play until you see a green check mark in the bottom right hand corner. You can skip ahead and go backwards in the module, but the module will not be considered complete until the green check mark appears.
- Once you have completed all of the modules, you will see a "take exam" button at the bottom of your last completed module, or on the overview screen within your last completed module.

- To pass the exam, you will need to answer 22 of 30 questions correctly. Once you pass the exam, please print or save the certificate of completion.

If you still have problems with the course after reviewing these instructions, please use the online help feature before contacting the Board. There is a "live help" button in the top right corner of the screen. If your inquiry is made between the hours of 7:00 a.m. and 7:00 p.m., immediate help via live chat is available by clicking on the "chat with us" button at the bottom of the window. After hours requests can be emailed to the course provider.

BUSINESS CASE FOR DIVERSITY

Bringing more minority group members into the CPA ranks has been a goal of the AICPA since 1969, but it is now clear that this goal has a strong business case based on demographics, the business imperative and human capital, Ralph A. Thomas, CEO of the New Jersey Society of CPAs, explained to the NASBA Executive Directors Conference. While good representation of both genders has been achieved in the profession, diversity in color has not happened. Mr. Thomas pointed out that the buying power of minority groups is growing faster than the buying power of Caucasians, and firms are being challenged to diversify their staffs, particularly if they do government work.

Mr. Thomas observed that the needle has moved slowly on increasing diversity, with minority group members only representing 2.5 percent of the profession. To increase diversity in the profession, the AICPA established its National Commission on Diversity and Inclusion (NCDI) that has released the "Recruitment and Retention Toolkit: A Journey Toward A More Inclusive Workforce," a guide for CPA firms and companies. In addition, they are producing a monthly newsletter Inclusion Solutions, which is free of charge to everyone. The NCDI has established a "Pipeline Project" to increase the number of underrepresented minorities entering the accounting profession.

NASBA has set as one of its objectives to: "Increase diversity of NASBA's leadership and volunteer base," Ed Barnicott, NASBA Vice President – Strategic Planning and Program Management, told the Conference. He reported NASBA's Diversity Committee, chaired by Tyrone E. Dickerson (VA), is preparing letters to be sent to the State Governors encouraging them to mix skills and ethnic and gender diversity when making their appointments to the State Accountancy Boards. The letters will first be sent to the Boards' executive directors to ensure they will not be problematic in their states. Mr. Barnicott called on the executive directors to: Educate their CPAs on the benefits of State Board service; Advocate for diversity and inclusion on the State Board to bring different thinking into the Boards' deliberations; Encourage Board members to serve on NASBA committees. He urged the executive directors to become engaged in this effort.

IN THE NEWS

EDUCATION PATHWAYS PROGRESSING

"There is a need to bring accounting practice and accounting education better together," said William F. Ezzell, Co-Chair of the American Accounting Association/AICPA Pathways Commission. A huge shortage of accounting faculty exists, he noted, and transitioning retired CPAs into the academic community has been one of the projects the Commission's task forces have undertaken. Recent steps the Commission has completed include:

- Compiled best practices from professionally-oriented faculty surveys;
- Developed professionally-oriented faculty integration principles; Encouraged periodicals, including the Journal of Accountancy, to publish more practice-oriented research summaries;
- Developed and planned faculty "boot camps" process for three sections of the AAA; Listed activities provided to academics;
- Explored opportunities for externships/internships.

Mr. Ezzell said the AAA is setting up a Center for Excellence in Accounting Education and will be giving awards focusing on the elements of teaching. The Commission is also exploring requiring alternative terminal degrees, rather than the Ph.D., to provide additional faculty.

An advanced placement accounting course for high school students has been developed and awaits approval by the College Board. Over 450 schools want to offer the course, Mr. Ezzell reported. The goal is to improve accounting's ability to attract high-potential, diverse entrants into the profession. Five schools in Kentucky have already shown the program works.

A straw man educational model for the common body of knowledge for someone who graduates from accounting has been developed. The employers of accounting graduates have indicated the need for graduates to have foundational/soft skills because their staff can obtain the content needed, but have to be able to apply professional judgment.

"We have to scramble to find data" on how many are taking accounting, how many are teaching accounting, etc., in order to put together a platform so that everyone gets included in the classroom what they need to influence future generations. "Saying there is only one curriculum will not work," Mr. Ezzell stated.
